

Our Capabilities in México, Latin America & the Caribbean

APCO Latin America & The Caribbean

apcoworldwide.com

Introduction /

APCO is a global advisory and advocacy firm helping clients worldwide, including in Mexico and the region, in both opportunities and complex challenges, to create results that positively, successfully, and sustainably impact their businesses and strategies.

We are the trusted and strategic advisers, consultants and creators to some of the world's leading corporations, foundations and governments—and to the bold leaders and organizations that can't afford to fail.

We thrive in outcomes-oriented partnerships, establishing collaborative goals and objectives.

We balance thoughtful strategy with nimble implementation to consistently improve and deliver for our clients.

What sets APCO apart in México and Latin America

At APCO, we take pride in having a team of Mexican and Latin American experts who work hand in hand with a global network in the world's major business centers. We have extensive knowledge across various industries in the areas of communications, stakeholder engagement, public affairs, executive visibility, and crisis and risk management. We understand the complex challenges and trends impacting businesses today, and we closely follow the evolution and changes in key global markets daily.

APCO offers expertise, innovative idea generation, and consulting capabilities at local, regional, and international levels for visionary leaders and organizations that require a strategic partner. Our ability to not only meet but exceed expectations is proven and is part of our culture. APCO's culture is based on vital connections, collaboration, trust, and a common purpose.

Connection

Clients and partners often tell us that the building of relationships and connections is an APCO superpower. This is in part due to our global mindset and local roots, International Advisory Council, and our ERG and Alumni communities, all of which contribute to a richly capable and connected culture that delivers for our clients.

Collaboration

Collaboration is one of those things that is easy to say (and everyone does), and yet hard to do. We believe in the diversity of thought and perspective, harnessing new tools, technology and personal interaction to work more closely together across functions, cultures and teams. Like pieces of a puzzle, the challenges of a complex world make more sense when we come together.

Confidence

In a complex world, confidence makes it possible to do what needs to be done, or what's never been done before when you can't afford to fail. Our clients take great confidence from our 40 years of experience and proven capability, and in our team's strength of character. They have the passion, wisdom, compass, and tenacity to see things through, above and beyond a brief.

Common Ground

Our clients need to serve the interests of stakeholders and shareholders alike, and both the organizations they serve and the societies in which they operate. We believe in bringing divergent forces and objectives together with a shared sense of purpose and outcome—to find common ground and build coalitions that advance client objectives and propel progress.

Our Values Inform Success

At APCO, our commitment to one another and our clients is embodied in our values, which we live and breath everyday. We celebrate new ideas, welcome diverse viewpoints and push ourselves to think and behave differently, and we believe our work and relationships are better for it.

Boldness

Push boundaries and produce better ideas to solve the really challenging problems of our time.

Inclusivity

Champion the diversity of people, embracing their thoughts and experiences.

Curiosity

Invest in learning and improving all that we do, ensuring we stay on the cutting edge.

Empathy

Understand the perspectives of clients, colleagues and stakeholders to better meet their needs.

Recognitions

As the worlds of politics, business, and civil society have intersected in ever more controversial and confusing ways, APCO's unique ability to help clients see around corners has become more valuable in the policy arena and beyond, in areas ranging from investor relations to CSR.

Businesses in Latin America are facing complex geopolitical considerations as we enter Q4 2024.

Some key considerations include...

2024 Q4 Geopolitical Considerations

Venezuela's presidential election sparks international concern and regional division

Latin America remains divided after Venezuela's presidential elections, with President Nicolas Maduro declaring victory without releasing official results and issuing an arrest warrant for opposition leader Edmundo Gonzalez. The regime has intensified its crackdown on dissent, drawing international condemnation, even from typically sympathetic countries like Colombia and Brazil.

The election outcome furthers democratic backsliding and affects energy, security, and migration in the region. Businesses face heightened uncertainty, potentially impacting investment. Moreover, the focus on Venezuela may shift attention from other regional issues, limiting opportunities for companies to engage and influence sector-related outcomes.

Latin America is becoming a battleground for digital transformation, increasing regulatory uncertainty

Latin America, traditionally neutral on geopolitical issues, is becoming a key proxy for superpowers competing for leadership in digital and tech infrastructure.

The Cartagena de Indias Declaration on AI governance, signed by 17 countries in August 2024, highlights the region's growing role in digital affairs as it tries to maintain independence amid competing AI frameworks from China, the U.S., and Europe.

Businesses face uncertainty due to unclear AI regulations on safety, responsible use, and equity. The private sector must monitor political developments, follow legal counsel, and understand how superpower dynamics and regional governance affect local decisions.

Brazil is taking increasing leadership in global convenings

Brazil will take center stage as host of the 2024 G20 in November, with high expectations to lead discussions on global challenges like governance, energy transition, and social inclusion.

A successful G20 could boost Latin America's credibility ahead of the COP30 climate talks in November 2025, also hosted by Brazil. It will be the first of several multilateral fora led by southern hemisphere countries, prioritizing issues key to developing nations.

Businesses should assess how their agendas align with upcoming global events, aiming to leverage opportunities for local and regional engagement to build strategic relationships and support long-term investments.

Changes in regional political landscape puts friendshoring at risk

Friendshoring, driven by the United States, has benefited several Latin American countries, especially Mexico, due to its proximity to the U.S., the USMCA free trade agreement, and investments in electric vehicles and renewable energy supply chains.

However, upcoming U.S. elections and changes in key Latin American governments (including Mexico, Chile, and Ecuador) create uncertainty about the durability of friendshoring policies. A decline in foreign direct investment (FDI) in 2023, potentially extending into 2024, may hinder growth in friendshoring initiatives.

Regardless of the election outcome, companies must adapt their strategies in Latin America to address new regional dynamics, particularly for Mexico and smaller economies, to seize friendshoring opportunities and mitigate risks.

Our Emphasis

Our core areas of expertise and capability

The primary focus and capabilities of our Latin American team are in financial, competitive, political and societal issues; championing our client's interests and permission to operate; and building reputations and strengthening their standing.

To understand the complex environment of Mexico and Latin America, it is essential to grasp geopolitical factors and explore, design, and implement concrete actions at both local and global levels.

What we know

At APCO we are a fusion of diverse viewpoints, experiences and talents that lived and breathed in over a dozen countries in Latin American and the Caribbean, including México.

Our deep understanding of the region, rich network and multiculturalism allows us to deliver truly integrated work in Public Affairs, Corporate Communications and Issues Management.

What we offer

We help organizations navigate the complexities of their markets by building reputations, brands, and relationships.

We offer public affairs and strategic communication services for those entering or looking to grow in the region as well as for México and Latin America-based organizations and leaders branching out elsewhere.

Leveraging the power of relationships

From Mexico City to Santiago, Latin America has spent the last two decades in political turmoil. Political instability, lack of regional unity, and diverse geographies, cultures, and populations bring an extra layer of complexity to an already challenging landscape requiring bespoke business market entry and public affairs strategies on a country-by-country basis.

What & How

Stakeholders are at the core of all we do. We turn the insights that come from our deep stakeholder relationships into forward-looking, creative solutions that push boundaries.

Our clients, including large multinational companies, trade associations, governments, NGOs, and nonprofit organizations, select APCO to be their partner because of our proven ability to provide a new kind of thinking and take on the toughest, most complex communication and policy problems while executing at the global, regional and local levels.

Our in-country partners

APCO has continuously identified the best-in-market local partners across each country that understand local realities and perceptions and can more effectively reach those you need to influence.

As country political alliances shift and realign in the region, this flexibility allows us to ensure our clients always have the best networks and counsel to respond to their needs. And knowing that what goes on inside a country is very different from how it is interpreted externally, these partners are seamlessly integrated into a global team of issue experts, public affairs, and policy advocacy professionals drawn from APCO and our extended network.

Our Team in México is Lead by

Martha Delgado Peralta

Martha Delgado Peralta, a renowned environmentalist and former Undersecretary for Multilateral Affairs and Human Rights at Mexico's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, joined APCO as President for Mexico and Latin America in May 2024. In her role as Undersecretary for Multilateral Affairs and Human Rights, which she assumed in December 2018, Delgado Peralta was responsible for the global strategy to attract foreign investment and strengthen Mexico's economic promotion worldwide. During the global COVID-19 pandemic, she was in charge of procuring medical supplies, coordinating global donations, securing vaccines, and opening the Mexico-China air bridge. From 2019 to 2023, Delgado Peralta chaired the inaugural Assembly of the United Nations Human Settlements Program (UN-Habitat). Prior to joining the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, she served as Secretary of the Environment for Mexico City, leading key projects that positioned the city as a global environmental leader, including the Mexico City Green Plan, the Climate Action Program, and the first bike-sharing program, Ecobici.

Our Network of Advisors

We are supported by a group of high-level advisors to ensure we keep our finger on the pulse of the issues, check and challenge our assumptions, and drive us to be more creative and envelope-pushing. We engage with them in periodic workshops, as well as more regularly (and perhaps less formally) in the early months when we work through the strategy. They will be available as we need them.

We will also draw on insights from our International Advisory Council that brings together more than 100 recognized leaders, including: former elected politicians; leaders of business and industry; academics at leading universities; world-class journalists and editors; NGO and nonprofit pioneers; and policy experts.

They don't just share insights and identify potential opportunities, but they also review and shape the tactical dimensions of our strategic approach and identify potential challenges along the way, so we are able to proactively address them.
